SUMMARY
The Court of Appeal Luxembourg issued a procedural order. The patent at issue relates to a method and device for secure communications over a network using a hardware security engine. According to the headnotes of the decision, when an appellant seeks to withdraw an appeal against only some of multiple respondents, the Court of Appeal must assess both the admissibility of that withdrawal and its legal consequences by examining whether the remaining respondents have been served, whether they wish the appeal to continue, and whether they have a legitimate interest in the court's ruling.
